“Urbanisation and climate change: How to reduce air and water pollution in Sub Saharan Africa“

Tuesday, November 23th from 5:00p.m to 7:30p.m. (Germany time)

Dear interested and friends of Africa

We cordially invite you to the online conference:

*“Urbanisation and climate change:
How to reduce air and water pollution in Sub Saharan Africa. “*

Africa contributes only 4% of global greenhouse gas emissions and yet it is already facing the worst effects of climate change. While the continent is largely rural, it has one of the fastest growing urbanisation rates in the world standing at roughly 567 million people today. Urban centers are often considered the future of prosperity in the developing world since they play a critical role in fighting poverty and sustaining economic growth. Unfortunately, they remain particularly vulnerable to climate change and impact from natural disasters. Poorly managed urbanization constitutes a major threat to achieving the SDGs either through direct or indirect effects on climate change, ecosystems, energy security, waste management, housing, urban mobility.

Join us in conversation with experts on sustainable urbanisation and climate change as we learn about new and innovative ways to achieve Agenda 2030 in Sub-Saharan Africa.
